

"Prevention of Audit Shortages in the Pharmacy - Personal Drinkware Scenario" - Transcript

00;00;00;06 - 00;00;26;17

Narrator:

Here is another prime example of why personal items should not be allowed in the pharmacy area. Watch as our pharmacist prepares a liquid medication. Notice the cup on the far corner. Watch what she does next. She pours the medication in the prescription bottle, then replaces the cap on the liquid medication. It seems like business as usual. But notice how she doesn't put the cap on the prescription bottle.

Narrator:

The cup comes back into view and she goes over to it. She pretends to grab a sticker at the opposite counter, but what you can't see from several angles is her pouring the medication into her cup. She returns to her counter, disposes of the now empty prescription bottle, and has a likely fooled staff members and security cameras alike.
